Global Standard for Food Safety

Originally created to establish a standard for the suppliers of food products to UK food retailers, the BRC Global Standard for Food Safety is now a leading standard, supported by major retailers throughout the world.

The BRC Global Standard for Food Safety has now been adopted by over 14,000 businesses in more than 90 countries.

Issue 5 of the Global Standard for Food Safety has been extensively revised to make it easier to use and features a number of innovations, including:

- More guidance on implementing HACCP
- Greater emphasis on senior management demonstrating their commitment to the aim of achieving quality and safety management
- Expanded sections on issues of major industry importance, such as allergens
- A more rigorous grading system linked to more frequent audits for poorly performing sites
- Revision of product categories that focus on technology of food production to clarify the competence requirements of auditors.

Certification to the Global Standard for Food Safety verifies technical performance, aids manufacturers' fulfilment of legal obligations and helps provide protection to the consumer.

Training and Certification

'The Standard on its own is basically a book. It is the BRC training courses and the technical competency of the suppliers that bring that book to life and ensure that the standards required are actually implemented on the production floor.'

Dr Geoff Spriegel, BRC Director of Global Standards and Technical Services

More and more retailers and producers worldwide are making certification against a BRC Standard a condition of trade for their suppliers. BRC training courses are a vital tool for suppliers who wish to achieve and maintain BRC certification.

How can BRC training help you achieve certification?

The BRC offers an extensive range of training courses that help manufacturers to understand the process of implementing and auditing against the Standards. The courses are highly interactive and focus on offering practical advice based on actual case studies. Courses can be tailored to suit individuals and organizations' specific needs.

Pick and mix content

In addition to its usual courses, the BRC now offers companies the opportunity to pick and mix content from any of the BRC training materials to create truly bespoke courses. This ensures delegates attending any BRC course are sure to leave armed with the knowledge they require to achieve and maintain certification.
